"The new investments will accelerate new business opportunities and create new jobs", Prashant Gokhale, MD, Bühler India

Swiss technology group Bühler celebrating its 30th anniversary of establishing its business in India plans to invest about CHF 21 million (Rs 200 crore) over the next 2 to 3 years to support the success of its customers in the region and overseas.

Speaking to media in Bangalore, Prashant Gokhale, Managing Director, Bühler India, said “The new investments will accelerate new business opportunities and create new jobs, while contributing solutions to address global challenges such as food security and food safety. This investment is not only about growth; it is about combining Bühler’s state-of-the-art technologies with local expertise to offer the most sustainable processes and solutions to our customers.”

With this plan, Bühler India aims to strengthen its position as a leading provider of state-of-the-art solutions for the grain milling industry. Currently, Bühler India’s 32,000 square meter premises in Bengaluru comprise the company’s headquarters, a manufacturing hub, and an Application & Training Centre (ATC) which covers multiple industrial applications. The ATC provides a platform for customers to conduct product and equipment trials, optimise processes, and conduct training across all operational levels – for mill proprietors, managers, and operators.
